- A zero tolerance policy will be ENFORCED for getting out of your vehicle.

What are the main differences between the Burchell's Zebra and the Mountain Zebra? Find out in your Official Addo guide!

Have you visited the Interpretive Centre?

 Botanical Reserve
Jack's Picnic Site is an old disturbed area within the 500 hectare Botanical Reserve. It is a protected area put aside to monitor the impact of megaherbivores - particularly elephants - on the subtropical thicket vegetation. Plant species and vegetation structure within this reserve are compared with similar areas outside this reserve to monitor long term effects.

8. Marine Protected Area:
The Marine Section of Addo Elephant National Park currently consists of the Bird Island and St Croix Island groups. The 120 000 Cape Gannet colony on Bird Island is the largest in the world. The MPA is 114 000 hectares. There are about 6 500 breeding pairs of critically endangered African penguins on St. Croix island; the largest breeding colony in the world. The Southern Right Whale and Great White Shark in these waters complete Addo Elephant National Park's "Big 7". Pods of Bottlenose Dolphins, Tursiops truncates, are a common sight in the waves along the shores of this coastline.

Note: Trips to Bird Island are not offered to visitors due to the ecological sensitivity of the islands. Whale watching boat trips are only offered by private licenced whale watching operators in Gqeberha and not by the Park. Accredited operators available on request.

 Find out more about the Marine Section in your Official Addo Guide!
